Introduction

As stipulated in the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898, local elections were to be held every three years – there were however several postponements. Previous to 1920, the last local elections had taken place in 1914 and were due to be held again in 1917, but were postponed due to the continuance of the First World War. The 1916 Easter Rising and the response by the British military saw an increase of support for national independence. County Wexford had played an integral role in the Rising – Enniscorthy was the last town in Ireland to surrender and the only area outside Dublin to raise the tricolour, and like their counterparts in Dublin, many of its active Volunteers and Cumann na mBan members were subsequently imprisoned, eliciting an outpouring of nationalist sympathy and support.

Following the resounding success for Sinn Féin in the 1918 General Election, MPs refused to take their seats at Westminster and on 21 January 1919, they founded a separate parliament in Dublin called Dáil Éireann. At this first meeting, a declaration of independence was adopted and the Dáil endorsed the Proclamation of the Irish Republic that had been issued in the 1916 Rising. On the same day as this first meeting, the War of Independence commenced with an ambush on the Royal Irish Constabulary (RIC) in Soloheadbeg, Co. Tipperary. There then followed a prolonged series of attacks and boycotts of the RIC, the Army and the British authorities. Dáil Éireann established a functioning government and courts, replacing the British-run administration in Dublin Castle.

The 1920 local elections in County Wexford took place against a backdrop of employment disputes, raids on residences for arms and ammunition, destruction of RIC barracks and attacks on civilians. A number of election candidates were still actively involved in the republican cause, some of whom were incarcerated in British jails at the time of their election.
The 1920 local elections were to be conducted under the system of Proportional Representation which had been first used in the municipal election in Sligo Corporation in 1919. The form of PR chosen was the single transferable vote in multi-seat constituencies, something that the Free Press in its issue of 10 January 1920 observed ‘secures that every party in a constituency shall obtain its fair share of representation, and makes the representative body a true reflex of the constituency which elects it’.

Under the new system, County Wexford’s previous 124 district electoral divisions which were grouped into 18 county electoral divisions were changed into four county electoral areas returning a total of 19 members to the county council. With the addition of four ex-officio members from the rural district councils and two additional co-opted members the total number was brought to 25. Membership of the rural district councils was substantially reduced.

There was no great effort to instruct the electorate in the principles and procedure of the new system as the government refused to finance a scheme for educating voters on the new system.
Letter from The Proportional Representation Society of Ireland to the town clerk, New Ross advising that following the government’s decision not to proceed with providing instruction in the PR system to candidates and electors, the Society intends carrying out the campaign as far as possible with its own resources (7 October 1919).

The Proportional Representation Society of Ireland

65 Middle Abbey Street
Dublin.
7th October, 1919.

The Town Clerk,
New Ross

Sir,

LOCAL GOVERNMENT (IRELAND) ACT, 1919.

Your Council will doubtless have observed from the correspondence which has appeared in the Press that the Irish Government have finally decided not to accept responsibility for the instruction of candidates and electors in the operation of the new system of voting and the opportunities which it presents.

The Council of this Society greatly regrets this decision as it holds very strongly the view that the possibilities of the system will only be realised if it is fully understood in its various aspects by candidates and electors. In these circumstances the Council has decided that it is bound as far as possible to supply the necessary instruction.

Having pressed the Local Government Board to arrange for at least one popular lecture in each of the 127 Cities and Urban Districts in which elections will take place in January, my Council now proposes to carry out this campaign as far as possible with its own resources and in co-operation with Local Authorities. The Executive Committee, therefore, earnestly request the co-operation of the Chairmen and members of your Council in this voluntary effort.
Letter from the Association of Municipal Authorities of Ireland to the town clerk, New Ross regarding instruction in PR to the electors and officers in the forthcoming borough and urban council elections (September 1919)

January 1920 elections

Borough and urban councils

The municipal and urban elections were held on 15 January 1920. Candidates represented five main groups – Labour; Sinn Féin; Independents; Ratepayers and Independent Labour.

Exception was taken to certain candidates in the municipal elections. The Free Press of 10 January 1920 reported on a meeting of the Wexford Trades and Labour Council that was held in light of Nicholas Connolly going forward in the Selskar ward on the Labour ticket as a nominee of the Wexford branch of the National Union of Railwaymen in opposition to the candidates selected by the council. The council called on every organised worker to oppose the nominee, as they did in the case of Patrick Morris, printer who was seeking election on the Sinn Féin ticket. A meeting of the Wexford branch of the Typographical Association was held calling on branch members to disassociate themselves from Morris as he was allowing himself to be nominated ‘in opposition to the candidates selected by the organised workers of the town’.

'It behoves every elector to record his votes in favour of those he considers best competent and most likely to carry on the public services efficiently and economically’

(The People newspaper, 10 January 1920)
The main feature noticeable in the municipal election for Wexford borough was the successful effort by Labour to secure stronger representation on the corporation. The Ratepayers put forward 19 candidates while all the retiring members, with the exception of Messrs Joseph Kelly (late Alderman), James French and Michael Doyle sought re-election.

Two ladies – Mary Anne O’Connor, North Main Street (shopkeeper) and Alice Fennell, High Street – put themselves forward for election as Ratepayers.

St Iberius Ward: 7 seats  14 candidates
Candidates comprised 4 Labour, 7 Ratepayers’ Association and 3 Sinn Féin
Elected: Aldermen James Sinnott (R), James Larkin (L) new
   Councillors Nicholas Byrne (R), Thomas Rossiter (L), Thomas Hayes (SF) new, Philip Cowman (R), Herbert Thompson (R) new

St Selskar Ward: 6 seats  13 candidates
Candidates comprised 3 Labour, 6 Ratepayers, 2 Independent Labour, and 2 others
Elected: Aldermen George H. Hadden (R), Nicholas Connolly (IL) new, Francis Carty (Ind.), Joseph Boyse (L), Richard Gibson (R), Miss Mary Anne O’Connor (R) new

St Mary’s Ward: 11 seats  17 candidates
8 Labour, 3 Sinn Féin, 6 Ratepayers Association
Elected: Aldermen Richard Corish (L), P. atrick Clancy (SF) new

Labour returned 10 representatives, while Sinn Féin and Independents returned three and two candidates respectively and according to The People (24 January 1920) would ‘control the board and may always be relied upon to vote Nationalist whenever a political question arises…. something the paper also attributed to ‘four of those elected for the Ratepayers’ Association’.
Enniscorthy Urban District Council

A total of 10 outgoing members sought re-election including Patrick O’Neill who had been unanimously appointed chairman ‘year after year’. Those nominated in opposition to the outgoing members were nominees of Sinn Féin and the several Labour bodies in the town. Surprisingly, one of the unsuccessful candidates for the south-west ward, Richard F. King had been one of the six Enniscorthy leaders in the town during the 1916 Rising. Enniscorthy town was divided by the Local Government Board into three wards – East, North West and South West wards.

East Ward: 4 seats 6 candidates
Templeshannon, The Shannon, Shannon Hill and the Quay

Elected:  William Murphy (SF) new, Patrick Murphy (SF) new, Richard Doyle (L) new, John Bennett, JP (N)

South-West Ward: 5 seats 8 candidates
South of town from the bridge through the centre of Slaney Street, Market Square, New Street and Ross Road

Elected:  Thomas D. Sinnott (SF) new, John Bolger, JP (N), Thomas McCarthy (L), Michael Maher (L) new, Timothy O’Connor (N)

North-West Ward: 6 seats 10 candidates
North of town from centre of the bridge and through Slaney Street, Market Square, New Street and the Cathedral side of town

Elected:  Patrick Brennan (L) new, John Murphy (SF) new, James O’Brien (L), new Patrick Tobin (L) new, Patrick O’Neill, MCC (N), and Matthew Sheridan (SF) new
New Ross Urban District Council

15 seats  20 candidates

Of the 15 outgoing councillors on New Ross Urban District Council, only three sought re-election – George Dooley, John Fanning and John Hand. The town was divided into two electoral areas – north-east ward and south-west ward. There was no contest in the former ward as the number of candidates put forward equalled the number of seats. Of the 13 candidates for the south-west ward, five withdrawals took place subsequent to the nominations having been accepted, Daniel Hanley, Joseph McCarthy, Francis O’Kennedy, James J. Walsh and P. Shannon, and the eight remaining candidates were returned unopposed.

North-East Ward: 7 seats  7 candidates

South-West Ward: 8 seats 13 candidates

Gorey Town Commissioners

9 seats  14 candidates

There were three outgoing candidates – James Cooke, Henry Wall and W. J. Brennan-Whitmore. Cooke, a chemist in the town, declared that he wasn’t going forward in the interest of any one particular party ‘but as an independent candidate with no politics, but solely in the interests of the town’.

First meeting of the newly-elected borough and urban councils

In its edition of 24 January 1920, The People newspaper observed that the local election results were ‘not altogether what was expected .... some have been returned whom it was scarcely believed would have been returned, while others have been defeated whom it was confidently believed would have been elected’.

There were a number of jubilant celebrations after the elections. The Free Press reported on a procession through the main street of Wexford town headed by Aldermen Richard Corish and James Larkin and the St Brigid’s Fife and Drum Band. Enniscorthy celebrated the victory of Sinn Féin and Labour wins with bonfires on Vinegar Hill followed by a torchlight procession through the town.

The first step for all the newly-elected bodies was the election of a chair and vice-chair. In Wexford Corporation’s case, two candidates were proposed for the office of mayor at the first meeting of the new council on 30 January 1920. Alderman Richard Corish’s name was put forward by Labour and Sinn Féin as a testament to ‘his indefatigable exertions in promoting the interests of the working man for many years past’.

The Ratepayers proposed Alderman George Hadden in recognition of his commitment as a member of the municipal council for the past 30 years. By a vote of 14 to eight, Richard Corish was declared elected and became the first Labour member to sit in the mayoral chair. The Labour Party now held a majority on the corporation for the first time, and Corish vowed that from that day forward, ‘the working classes in Wexford were going to command the respect they deserved’. He identified two main priorities for the municipal body – the provision of houses and the appointment of an exclusive sanitary committee to address the ‘damnable state’ of sanitation in the town.
The outgoing chairman William Hugh McGuire said that this was the first occasion upon which a Mayor had the pleasure of addressing lady councillors on Wexford Corporation, and he extended to Alice Fennell and Mary Anne O’Connor ‘a hearty welcome on behalf of the male members of the council’.

In Enniscorthy Urban District Council, Thomas McCarthy (Labour), a seasoned member of the council, was elected as chairman. In his speech, he made reference to some of the challenges ahead for the council including the provision of large housing schemes, electric lighting and an increase in rates. He also referred to the ‘big amount of expense’ incurred in the recent elections – ‘at least three or four times greater than what the elections used to cost under the old system’. John Murphy was elected as vice-chair.

T.D. Sinnott gave notice of his intention to move at the next meeting that the UDC’s resolution of 13 May 1916 condemning the 1916 Rising ‘be cut from the minute book of the council in the presence of the council’. This received extensive coverage in the local newspapers with a vivid portrayal of the incident captured in The People headline of 7 February 1920 ‘Battle for minute book – a resolution cut from minutes – town clerk attempts to prevent mutilation of books’. Sinnott argued that the resolution ‘condemned and described as robbers and blackguards a number of the present members of the council’, and that by cutting it from the minutes ‘was the best tribute they could pay to the memory of the men, who had gone forth to make their protest against such resolutions and beliefs it enunciated’. The chairman suggested rescinding the former motion rather than mutilating a public record but the resolution was ultimately cut from the volume.

‘The members of our public boards should always remember that they are Irishmen and that we are seeking the liberty of our country. We live in exceptional time and though the trend appears to be to contest public positions on the employers and unemployed ticket, it should always be remembered that our country in present peculiar circumstances claims our thoughts and our help to secure her freedom’

The People, 4 February 1920
30th January, 1920.

A Statutable Meeting of the Council was held this day at the Town Hall at noon.

This was the first meeting held under the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1919, an Enactment which prescribed for the first time for Municipal Elections to be held under the Proportional Representation system of election.

The Elections for the new Council took place on the 15th Instant, when the following 24 persons were elected, namely.

As Aldermen: James Sinnott, James Larkin, Richard Corish, Patrick Clancy, George Hadden, Nicholas Connelly.

As Councillors: Nicholas Byrne, Thomas Rossiter, Thomas Hayes, Philip Cowman, Herbert Thompson, James Crosbie, John Walsh, Michael Martin, Laurence Cummins, Thomas O’Brien, James Billington, David O’Neill, James Sinnott, Alice Mary Fennell, Francis Carty, Joseph Boyse, Richard Gibson, Mary Anne O’Connor.

It so happened that all the above Members were in attendance.

The Chair was taken by the outgoing Mayor, William H. McGuire, Esq., in pursuance of a Sealed Order made by the Local Government Board under date of 19th December 1919, entitled The Adaptation (Day of Annual and Quarterly Meeting) Order 1919.

It having been seen to that all the Members of the newly-elected Council had taken their Declarations of Acceptance of Office, the business of electing a Mayor was proceeded with.
Motion carried by members of Enniscorthy Urban District Council to cut the resolution of 13 May 1916 (condemning the 1916 Rising) from the minute book ‘in the presence of the Council’ (4 February 1920)
Extract from the minutes of New Ross Urban District Council of 9 May 1916 in which the resolution condemning the 1916 insurgents was subsequently rescinded by resolution of the newly-elected council on 10 February 1920

The following resolution, in reference to the recent outbreak was proposed by Mr. Hand and Seconded by Mr. Sweeney. Resolved:

That the New Ross Urban Council hereby in the strongest possible manner condemn the action of the Sinn Fein organisation and Citizen Army in their outrageous disgraceful and blackguardly conduct at present carried on both in the robbing and looting in Dublin and elsewhere, and we as a National Board entirely disassociate ourselves from such disgraceful and unseemly scenes even more so at a time when our Empire and our Allies are involved in one of the greatest struggles for freedom the world has ever known, and we regard the present conduct as an insult to our brave and gallant Brethren who have sealed the common bond between England and Ireland by shedding their blood on the battlefields of Flanders and other scenes of action.

That we pass this resolution to show that the responsible parties for the present crisis in Ireland are of the "Irresponsible Class" and so that the action of the loyal subjects cannot be misinterpreted by our Allies or our Empire.
Resolution adopted by New Ross Board of Guardians requesting that the chairman of the Irish Prison Board permit an independent medical examination of interned prisoners in Cork Gaol, 19 February 1919
In New Ross Urban District Council, James Murphy was proposed as chair – however, he in turn proposed George Dooley (SF), whom he described as ‘a good Irishman, a lover of the old language and a man that wished to see the old land back again to its place amongst the nations of the earth’. Dooley was duly elected chair with John Fanning elected as vice-chair.

Fanning then passed a motion expunging the resolution of May 1916 from the council’s minutes. He stated that if left unchanged, ‘they would be condemning Father Murphy and condemning the monument outside the Tholsel erected by the Ross people and the monuments in Gorey, Enniscorthy and other places for the very same thing’.

The first meeting of the newly-elected Gorey Town Commissioners took place on 30 January 1920 but was adjourned until that evening to allow for time for John Gannon, who had recently been released from Mountjoy prison to attend. At the evening meeting, one of the newly-elected town commissioners, William P. Keegan proposed Gannon as their new chairman. However, no one present seconded the motion and John O’Byrne was subsequently elected to the chair. O’Byrne stated that he stood ‘for liberty’ and in the interests of Labour and Sinn Féin’ and was particularly interested in ‘the welfare of the labourers of the town’.

While Sinn Féin and Labour have done much to educate the electorate on the new system of voting, it is feared that in the rural districts the number of spoiled papers will be considerable

Free Press, 29 May 1920
June 1920 elections

County council, rural district councils and boards of guardians

A number of public meetings were held in the run up to the county and rural district council elections including one held at Camross in support of the Sinn Féin candidates. Dr James Ryan MP presided at the meeting and urged the electorate to ensure that ‘none of those who were out for something less than a free and independent Ireland were elected’, the object being to have the public boards ‘if possible composed entirely of men who stood for Irish independence’ (The People, 29 May 1920).

In an anti-Sinn Féin/Labour appeal, John Larkin from Sallystown, one of the candidates in the district council elections addressed a meeting of Ratepayer electors in Piercestown in late May and advocated that the common interests of farmers and agricultural labourers would be best safeguarded ‘by returning men of moderate views to the public bodies’.

Efforts to educate the electorate on the PR system were highlighted in The People of 5 June 1920. Alderman and Mayor Richard Corish and Messrs Culleton, Boggan, Larkin and Rossiter toured the south-eastern part of the county in the interests of the Labour candidates. At each place, Corish ‘gave an illustrated explanation’ of the PR system of voting.

The Free Press in its editorial on 5 June 1920 reported ‘little activity at the booth which characterised former elections’, with less than one-third of voters exercising the franchise. It attributed this public apathy to the majority of the candidates standing as republicans either on the Sinn Féin
Republican candidates have secured an overwhelming majority on the new councils in the county.

Free Press, 5 June 1920

Few candidates sought re-election and those who did went forward mainly as Independent candidates. Sinn Féin and Labour acted jointly in Enniscorthy, Gorey and New Ross in comparison to Wexford where they acted independently ‘and solicited the suffrage in the interests of their respective nominees’.

Séan Mac Eoin or Labour tickets. It was noted that a marked feature of the elections ‘was the absence of police, who usually maintained order at the booths and escorted the presiding officers with the ballot boxes to the returning officers’. Despite their absence however, the polling was said to have been carried out ‘in a perfectly orderly manner’.

Wexford County Council election  19 seats  34 candidates

The number that exercised the franchise was less than expected though there was ‘keen interest’ in the contests. In the Wexford area, it was reported that only a little more than one-third of the total number of voters came to the polls while Enniscorthy fared better with nearly half turning out.

Ballot boxes were conveyed to the council chamber in Wexford courthouse on Tuesday night and N. J. Frizelle, returning officer and his staff began the counting of the votes the following morning ‘which continued late into the night and was resumed on Thursday morning’.

Enniscorthy Rural District Council and Board of Guardians

Out of a total electorate of 6,153, only slightly over half exercised the franchise. It was reported in The People newspaper that ‘Labour and Sinn Féin polled to the last man, and both organisations left nothing to chance for the return of their respective candidates’. In the four areas, only one outgoing candidate – John Cooney, Oulart (Ind.) – succeeded in getting elected.

The polling for Gorey Rural District Council was reported to have ‘passed off quietly’ with only half of the electors having exercised the franchise. After polling, the ballot boxes were removed to the boardroom of Gorey workhouse, escorted by Volunteers ‘some of whom wore uniform and carried batons’. The counting of votes was undertaken by returning officer J. J. Fanning and his staff on Wednesday and continued on into the following day.

Sinn Féin and Labour worked jointly and were opposed by some of the outgoing candidates who went forward on the Independent ticket.

It was reported by the local newspapers that the police throughout the district were ‘conspicuous by their absence and Volunteers turned up in large numbers at the different centres’. The republican seal was attached to the ballot boxes in addition to the official seal at the close of the poll and Volunteers escorted them to the workhouse in New Ross and mounted guard during the night. Mr J. J. Rochford, union clerk counted the votes the next day.

Wexford County Council

John R. Etchingham, TD was elected in absentia as the first Sinn Féin chairman of Wexford County Council at its inaugural meeting on 18 June 1920. He did not take up his position as chair until 30 August 1921. Dr James Ryan was elected as vice-chair, and a deputy vice-chair, Albert F. Smith was also elected. In Etchingham’s absence, Ryan presided over most of the council meetings up to 7 December 1920.

A further two county councillors were elected – Philip Lennon from New Ross and John Pender from Ferns. Four ex-officio members from the rural district councils were also elected at the meeting – Michael Byrne, Ballywilliam; James Doyle, Enniscorthy; Owen Kehoe, Coolgreany and Gregory Devereux, Killinick bringing the total strength of the county council to 25 members.

One of the first resolutions adopted by the county council was an acknowledgement of Dáil Éireann as the duly elected Government of the Irish Republic. The members then voted in favour of rescinding four resolutions from the minutes in 1916 in which the Rising and its leaders had been condemned. Other items under discussion at the first meeting included the issue of a war bonus payment to certain road contractors, applications for the award of the university scholarship scheme, a proposal to take back St Brigid’s Inebriate Home with a view to using it as county council offices, and a proposal put forward that all positions in the county council be given to candidates who possessed a knowledge of Irish.
Wexford Board of Guardians

At the first meeting of the newly-elected Wexford Board of Guardians held on 11 June 1920, Ellen (Nelly) O’Ryan was unanimously elected chairperson with Michael Martin as vice-chair. Acknowledging her election, Miss O’Ryan said that ‘it was an honour which she did not expect, especially at the present time, when they came as a board for the first time as representatives of a free and independent Ireland’. One of the first improvements she proposed was the abolition of the workhouse system. ‘There is no reason why descendants of the people driven out by the planters should be in here and called paupers….they have as good blood in their veins as we have, and it is for us to see whether we cannot make these old men and women free, and give them a right to live outside’.

Gorey Rural District Council

Patrick Fitzpatrick was elected as chairman of Gorey RDC on 12 June 1920 and one of his first proposals, which was passed unanimously, was an acknowledgment by the council of the authority of Dáil Éireann.

Other items discussed included the sanctioning by the Local Government Board of the resignation by Mr R. Creighton of the office of clerk of Gorey RDC, and claims lodged for malicious injury in respect of the burning of RIC barracks at Camolin, Courtown Harbour, Clonevin and Ballycanew.
New Ross Rural District Council

At the first meeting of newly-elected members on 11 June 1920, Michael Byrne was elected chairman and the position of vice-chair given to Thomas O’Hanlon.

The ordinary meeting followed after the elections and included the consideration of malicious injury claims for destruction of various infrastructure, including house furniture, RIC barracks at Ballinaboola, Ballybrazil and Tintern, and telegraph wires at Ballyanne.

Enniscorthy Board of Guardians

In the minutes of the first meeting held on 11 June 1920, T.D. Sinnott was elected as chairman with Walter Furlong elected vice-chair.

A proposal by Sinnott ‘that the resolution of the Board of Guardians disapproving of the Easter Rising 1916 be excised from the Records of the Board of Guardians’ was passed unanimously. Also discussed was a proposal to change two street names in the town from George’s Street and New Street to Rafter Street and Wafer Street respectively.

Comment

Proportional representation was introduced for the 1920 local elections, with the expectation that it would dilute Sinn Féin support. However, achieving widespread electoral success nationally, the party took control of 25 of the 33 county councils including in County Wexford.

Once the local elections were over, a rapid transformation took place. All Sinn Féin candidates had been required, as a condition of their nomination, to pledge allegiance to the Republic and to recognise the Dáil as the source of governmental authority rather than the Local Government Board. Consequently, this was one of the early items addressed on the agenda of the first meetings of the county, urban and rural bodies. This recognition of the Dáil resulted in the loss of grant assistance to the county councils with raids carried out in an attempt to forcibly access the records.

A report by the county secretary was read at the council meeting held on 7 December 1920 detailing that a number of police had visited the county council offices the previous week and had taken away two minute books, three letter books, a bank pass book and rate collectors’ receipts and forms. That same afternoon, a number of civilians visited the council offices and ‘having held up staff’, seized a number of lodgement records, rate ledgers, abstracts of accounts and financial and expenditure volumes. Similar occurrences took place in local government offices across the county.
A number of resignations by elected members from Wexford County Council took place towards the last quarter of 1920. A letter from John Sinnott was read at the county council meeting of 7 December that year in which he conveyed his desire to resign his seat for the six months of his imprisonment in Cork. A resolution was taken at the county council meeting of 22 December 1920 to protest against the arrest and detention of Dr James Ryan (vice-chair), and of John O’Byrne, A.F. Smith, John Sinnott and James Doyle ‘who have been deprived of their liberty in order to hamper and impede the administration of the Council’. A number of replacements were subsequently co-opted in these cases.

Women featured more prominently at local government level in the 1920 elections in County Wexford. Since 1896, women with certain property qualifications had been eligible for election as poor law guardians, and under the 1898 Local Government Act, could stand for all the new councils with the exception of borough and county councils. The Representation of the People Act, 1918 gave many more people the opportunity to vote for the first time including women over 30 years of age, and this may have assisted in the election of a greater number of female candidates. Two women – Mary Anne O’Connor and Alice Fennell were elected to Wexford Corporation – a first for the municipal body. Three female candidates – Mary Kate McTaminey, Mary Anne O’Connor and Ellen Ryan – were elected as poor law guardians in St Mary’s and St Selskar’s wards in Wexford urban area while Kathleen Redmond and Ellen Cleary were successful Sinn Féin candidates on New Ross board of guardians.

The term of the new council was for five years – by the time the next local elections were held in 1925, the rural district councils and the boards of guardians had been both abolished under the Local Government Act, 1925 passing their responsibilities to county councils, effectively helping to streamline functions and services at local government level.
Minutes of 24 August 1920 regarding notification from the Local Government Board regarding the importance of Wexford County Council conforming to the rules and orders of the board in an effort to protect its financial position.

Financial position of Council.

The meeting was called by directions of the Chairman of the Council, (Mr J. R. Etchingham) "to consider the present and future financial position of the Council and to make any order or provision necessary thereto."

In connection with this matter Circular letter under date 29th July 1920, No. 122M. 1920, Miscellaneous, from the Local Government Board was read. The Local Government Board pointed out that no loans or grants would be made to any local authority without a definite assurance that the accounts would be submitted to audit and the local authority be prepared to conform to the rules and orders of the Local Government Board.

Under date 4th August 1920, the Under Secretary, Dublin Castle, (letter 19394-1920) wrote that the Lord Lieutenant was withholding further payments from the Local Taxation (Ireland) Account until a definite assurance is received from the Authorities concerned that they will distribute the money to the services for which it was assigned by Statute, that the Accounts would be submitted to the Local Government Board for Audit, and that the local bodies would conform to the rules and orders of the Local Government Board.
The minutes of the various local government bodies in County Wexford are worthy of detailed research into this period.
