137—The following Report of the Wexford Free Bridge Trustees was received and approved:—

The Trustees of the Wexford Free Bridge regret they cannot announce to the Grand Jury the completion of the approaches to the New Free Bridge, and the final winding up of the trust for which they were originally embodied. They have to report that the Bridge has been constructed. The approach roads on the north-eastern side leading to Castlebridge and Ferrybank are complete, and the sum of £1,500 has, in compliance with the Act of 1860, been lodged with the Commissioners of Public Works for the removal of Old Bridge and Causeway. These works cannot, however, be proceeded with, or the New Bridge opened for traffic, owing to the unfinished state of the approaches from the New Bridge to the Town. For the imperfect condition of these works, the Trustees are not responsible. The construction of them was entrusted to the Bagnalstown and Wexford Railway Company by the Acts of 1860—23 and 24 Vic., c 107, s 22; 23 and 24 Vic., c 24, s 59. The Trustees considering the works were not pushed forward sufficiently applied in Nov. 1861, for a mandamus to compel their execution by the Company, and it was only on the assurance of every effort being made for their speedy completion by Mr. Redmond, M.P., acting on behalf of the Company, and on the recommendation of the Grand Jury, that the Trustees refrained from vigorously pressing the legal proceedings instituted. When the further prosecution of the Bagnalstown and Wexford Line of Railway was abandoned by the Company, an Act was procured by them, transferring their powers, in connection with the construction of these approaches, to a private individual, William Archer Redmond, Esq., continuing to him the privilege of receiving advances during the progress of the work subject to the certificate of your officer, the County Surveyor, and subject to the condition of the work being taken out of his hands, if the Grand Jury at this Assizes should not consider that sufficient progress had been made—26 and 27 Vic., Session 1862-63—Sec. 8. The Trustees have been most anxious to give such facilities as they considered themselves justified in doing. They have been unwilling to throw any unnecessary obstacle in the way when deviations and alterations of plan were made during the execution of the works, provided such should not interfere with their completion in a substantial manner, and at the time indicated by the Act. They highly approve of the way in which the County Surveyor, who is also their engineer, has acted in giving certificates for advances of money as far as was consistent with security that the roads should be satisfactorily completed for the public. As, however, Mr. Redmond, the person executing the work under the Act of 1860, was bound by no contract, and had given no sureties for the due completion of the work, this security for the public could only be retained by limiting the advances to the value of the work actually executed, and reserving in hand as much as would complete the roads if the execution of them should be taken from Mr. Redmond and entrusted to others, to be appointed by the Grand Jury, pursuant to the provisions of the Act already quoted. The period has now arrived at which the Grand Jury must give their decision on the subject. The Trustees, unwilling that the Grand Jury should be taken by surprise, or unprepared, have, in addition to the consideration bestowed on it by themselves, taken the opinion of Counsel on the whole question as it now stands. They cannot see any likelihood of the works being completed by the time limited in the Act, viz., 1st August, 1864. The opinion of Counsel is very definite—that if the Grand Jury do not act now, they, or succeeding Grand Juries, will have no power of interference. The Trustees, therefore, feel that they must, consistently with their duty to the public, recommend the Grand Jury to adopt the suggestion of their Counsel, and nominate their County Surveyor to complete the work, should he think it necessary, in such manner as may be best done with the residue of the £7,000 presented in 1860, and levied off the County, and now in the Treasurer's hands. No injustice will be done to any party, as it is especially provided that should Mr. W. A. Redmond be prevented from completing the approaches, he should be paid for so much of the work as the County Surveyor shall certify he has executed. The Trustees append the opinion of Counsel at length, and leave the matter in the hands of the Grand Jury.

The opinions of Counsel is therefore requested on the following Queries:—

Will the Grand Jury assembled at the ensuing Summer Assizes of 1864, have the power of extending the time for the completion of the Roads by the said William A. Redmond, in case they may not be completed by that time; and would a Grand Jury assembled at any subsequent Assizes have the same powers under the 8th section of the Act of 1863, of appointing a person to complete the roads in case they should consider that sufficient progress had not been made by Mr. Redmond?

Opinion.

In my opinion the Grand Jury that shall be assembled at the next Summer Assizes for the County Wexford will not have power to extend the time for the completion of the works by Mr. W. A. Redmond, the only power which they have under the Act is to appoint any other person whom they may think fit to complete the works; and the Grand Jury for the said County will not, in my opinion, at any future time have any power to make such an appointment—such an appointment is strictly a statuteable one, and must be made in accordance with the terms of the statute “at the Summer Assizes, 1864,” and “if the opinion of the Grand Jury be that sufficient progress has not been made by the said W. A. Redmond.”

Query.

In case the Grand Jury assembled at the ensuing Assizes (or any subsequent Assizes in case they have such power) should consider it necessary to appoint a person to complete the roads, would such person have the power of obtaining materials under the provisions of the Grand Jury Act 6 & 7 W 4, cap. 116, sec. 162, or would his powers for procuring same be under the Lands Clauses or the Railways (Ireland) Act?

Opinion.

This case is one of considerable difficulty, and from the very loose way the Acts of 1860 and 1863 referred to have been prepared, must tend to great uncertainty in the opinion to be given on it. The Bagnalstown and Wexford Railway Company's compulsory powers to purchase or take lands were gone at the time of the passing of the Act of 1863, which Act purports to give the appointee of the Grand Jury the same powers the Company then had—and if, under the plans and sections described in their books of reference, they had power to take the field in question, it would appear such power as a compulsory one was gone both to the Railway Company and to the appointee of the Grand Jury; but, looking to the construction of the 32nd section of the 8th and 9th Vic., chapter 20, it would appear that the time for the completion of the Enniscorthy and Wexford line not having expired, that the Company, and, consequently, the appointee of the Grand Jury under the Act of 1863, might exercise the powers given by the 32nd section for obtaining materials for the construction of the approach roads—but upon this point, without having instructions as to the plans, levels, &c., made by the Company, the distance from the field in question to the road &c., I cannot take upon myself to give any decisive opinion.

With respect to the powers granted by the Grand Jury Act for obtaining materials to complete the approach road, the difficulty in the question arises from the work not being strictly one contemplated by that Act, but provided for by other Statutes. But giving the Grand Jury Act a liberal construction, and considering the funds have been raised by presentment, I am of opinion that the County Surveyor (if appointed by the Grand Jury at the next Assizes), or any other person appointed by them, and duly entering into a contract, pursuant to the provisions of Grand Jury Act, may exercise the powers given by the Act for raising and taking materials under the Section referred to.

I would advise the Grand Jury at the next Assizes, should they be of opinion that Mr. Redmond has not made sufficient progress, to appoint the County Surveyor to complete the work, as otherwise their power must be gone, and such appointment need not be exercised should Mr. Redmond proceed to finish the work within the time.

Signed,

WILLIAM MONK GIBBON,
