'The Workhouse was the most feared and hated institution ever established in Ireland'

John O'Connor 'The Workhouses of Ireland: The fate of Ireland's poor'

The Workhouse

Designed to deter, the workhouse was the very last option for the destitute in Ireland.

On entry, families were separated, personal clothes swapped for a uniform, and all personal decisions taken away. What to eat, when to sleep, work, or rest - all dictated by the Master and Board of Governors.

Famine in County Wexford

The county did not experience the ravages of famine to the same degree as Munster and the west of Ireland. However the impact on the cottier and labourer class was devastating.

Their hardship can be measured by the numbers resorting to the assistance of the four Workhouses in the county.

Why Female Orphan Assisted Migration?

Girls were perceived as a burden on the ratepayer. Their migration would:

- Alleviate workhouse overcrowding
- Provide a new labour force of domestic servants
- Adjust the gender balance in the colonies

The female population of New South Wales increased from

33% in 1846 to 43% in 1850

The cost of Migration

The average cost to keep an occupant in Gorey workhouse in 1850 1s. 3d. (1 shilling and 3 pence) per week.

The Board of Guardians paid up to £5 per orphan for their clothes & transport as far as Plymouth.

The Colonial Land and Emigration Commission (CLEC) paid the remainder of the costs, using funds from land sales in Australia

The selection process

Girls were selected for the scheme and assessed by the Workhouse Board of Guardians, then the regional Poor Law Inspector. A final assessment was undertaken by the Emigration Officer, Lieutenant Henry.

Each girl was vaccinated against small pox, checked for good health, morals and ability to work.

In Gorey, 40 girls were initially selected

21 left Ireland for Australia

The wooden chest

Each girl was provided with items specified by the Commissioners.

'A wooden chest, with a lock, in which to keep their belongings

If Catholic, a bible, if Protestant, a prayerbook.

Six shifts, two flannel petticoats, six pair stockings, two pair shoes, two gowns one of which must be made of some warm material.'

Bonnets were also included as were sewing materials including threads.

Aged just 14, Celia Edwards received two pairs of shoes prior to her departure, possibly her first footwear.

Children (those under 15) traditionally went barefoot.

'New Liverpool'

Fifteen girls left Gorey Union workhouse on 17 April 1849.

From Dublin Port, a steam packet took them to Plymouth in south west England.

They set sail on the 'New Liverpool' with 186 other girls from around the country.

After 15 weeks at sea, they arrived in Port Phillip, New South Wales on 9 August 1849.

Life on board

Meals

Compared to 2 sparse meals a day in the workhouse, the girls had half a pound of meat daily as well as peas, rice, preserved potatoes, tea, coffee, sugar and butter.

Work and Education

Quarters were kept clean, clothing repaired, knitting and sewing skills improved.

Reading classes were provided.

Australia

On arrival, the girls were housed in Immigration Depots until indentures were arranged for them.

Hyde Park Barracks in Sydney housed hundreds of new arrivals.

The Hiring Room

Indentures were agreed with wages on a sliding scale according to age.

14 year olds received £7 per annum

Age 15 - £8 p.a.

Age 16 - £9 p.a.

Age 17 upward - £10 p.a.

Work

Their contemporaries in the workhouse were not paid for work carried out and so, the salaries received, along with bed and board, provided an opportunity for independence.

However, compared to domestic servants in Ireland and Australia, the girls earned considerably less.

Provided both parties to the agreement were happy, the employment was permanent.

Either party could apply to break the contract if terms were not met.

Contracts included the employer's responsibility to the employee, including payment of health care, and attendance at weekly church services. Bed and board was included.

Girls were not contracted to single men or to inn keepers

Life in Australia

Of the 21 girls from Gorey, research to date tells us 9 were married, all within a short time of arrival :

Grace Brien married Edmund Towns in 1850

Mary Canavan married Emmanuel Serong in 1851, and Norman McDonald in 1861. She had 7 children.

Susan Cooper married Thomas Melbourne in 1852; they had 9 children.

Eliza Doyle married William Smith in 1852; they had 7 children

Celia Edwards married John Baxter in 1854; she had 1 child.

Sarah Hanlon married George Clarke; they had 4 children

Bridget Kelly married Richard Carew Sullivan in 1850; they had 10 children - she died in childbirth

Mary Quinn married Richard Filer in 1850; they had 'several' children

Johanna Redmond married John Downs in 1851, and Benjamin Taylor in 1858; she had 8 children.

For 5 of the New Liverpool girls their arrival in Melbourne did not signify the end of their travels by sea.

They travelled on the steamer 'Raven' to Portland, a small coastal settlement approximately 400km west of Melbourne.

From there, they were indentured to various businesses in Port Fairy, 75km east of Portland.

Johanna Redmond, Monamolín

Records for the girls on the 'Tippoo Saib' are sparse with the exception of Johanna.

Arriving in Sydney aged 16, she couldn't read or write although the workhouse minutes record her skills as 'read, knit, sew & wash' Noted as a Dairymaid, on arrival her name was amended to 'Redman'.

On 22 December 1851 she married John Downs - they had 'at least' 3 children.

In 1858, on 24 September, she married Benjamin Taylor; a further 5 children were born.

In 1869 Johanna, aged 37, was jailed for vagrancy, her husband's whereabouts unknown.

Their 3 sons were sent to Diamantina Orphanage; the whereabouts of their daughters was unknown.

Her first 3 children are not recorded.

Those left behind

Further research is required to identify those left behind and the lives they led. There are few clues as to why they didn't make the final selection.

The workhouse minute books name numerous girls as potential participants in the scheme - however these young women were not found in the Australian records.

The Registers of Admissions and Registers of Discharges detailing the arrivals and departures of workhouse residents for the four County Wexford workhouses have not survived. Burial records are not available.
